Speaker: Nick Boles grew up as the youngest in a large family. His parents live on the family sheep farm in Devon. 300 hundred acres of heavy clay soil divided into small fields by high banks with hedges on top. After school, he spent a year teaching English and Bible Studies in a small Methodist secondary school in the middle of the bush in Zimbabwe. Before starting work, Nick spent three years at Oxford studying politics, philosophy and economics and was awarded a first class honours degree. He then won a Kennedy Scholarship and spent two years at Harvard University in the United States studying the practical application of public policy. He was selected as the candidate for Grantham & Stamford in 2008 and was successfully elected in 2010, He was quickly appointed Planning Minister in October 2012. In 2014 Nick was appointed as Minister of State for Skills & Equalities until June 2016. In April 2017, Nick was successfully re-elected with a 20,094 majority at the snap election held on the Thursday, 8th June 2017.
